

AggingWell

Vol. 1 No. 4

Fall 2008

Staying Connected

Although e-mail's popularity continues to increase, 63% of Americans aged 65 and older are not online. Despite their interest in family members' lives, such as engagements, graduations, and grandchildren's accomplishments, elders frequently miss out on opportunities to keep abreast of the latest family news.

Presto, coupling an HP Printing Mailbox and Presto Mail service, enables tech-savvy family members to send e-mail messages, family photos, and even medication reminders to elders who aren't online. Without the hassle and expense of a computer or Internet connection, e-mail messages and digital photos can be received in the elder's home from any e-mail program, mobile phone or PDA.

Presto eliminates spam, advertisements, and junk e-mail by printing messages only from individuals on the user's approved Presto Friends list. With only three buttons, it's designed for simple operation and works with a user's existing analog phone line.

For additional information, visit www.presto.com.